Additional Information:

Ann's practice is primarily focussed in the areas of personal injury and clinical negligence. Her previous experience also provides her with a keen interest in health and safety law.

Ann is adaptable with a broad range of skills, and a wealth of legal and commercial experience.

Prior to turning to the law in 2003, Ann worked in the financial services sector where she specialised in managing credit risk. Ann advised on the legal aspects of risk management ensuring that the risk models complied with legal requirements. She worked with European financial institutions carrying out due diligence on the risk models used. She then undertook the accelerated LLB, at University of Edinburgh graduating in 2005 with distinction, completing the Diploma in Legal Practice in 2006. She trained as a solicitor with COPFS before pursuing her career as an Advocate. During her time with COPFS Ann worked in specialised units, including the Health and Safety Division, Appeals Unit and Fatalities Investigation. She is an experienced court practitioner, having appeared in, and managed, many complex and sensitive cases. She has appeared in proceeds of crime proceedings and fatal accident enquiries.
